

THE LEAD FOLLOW-UP SELF-AUDIT

What happens after a lead comes in? Walk through it honestly. It takes about ten minutes and the answers stay with you.

1. WHEN A LEAD COMES IN

- ☐ I know every place a lead can arrive: phone calls, website forms, Facebook and Instagram messages, lead forms, and texts.
- ☐ Each of those places notifies a specific person, not a shared inbox nobody owns.
- ☐ Someone checks for new leads on evenings and weekends, and I know who.
- ☐ I can tell which leads came from ads and which came from somewhere else.

2. SPEED TO LEAD

Look up your last five leads. When did each one come in, and when did someone first reach them?

Lead	Came in (day and time)	First contact (day and time)	Time waited	Outcome
1	_____	_____	_____	_____
2	_____	_____	_____	_____
3	_____	_____	_____	_____
4	_____	_____	_____	_____
5	_____	_____	_____	_____

- ☐ I'm comfortable with those wait times if I picture myself as the customer.

3. WHO ANSWERS

- ☐ One named person owns first contact during business hours: _____
- ☐ A backup is named for when that person is on a job, off, or sick: _____
- ☐ There is a plan for leads that arrive after 6 p.m.: _____
- ☐ There is a plan for leads that arrive on Saturday and Sunday: _____

4. MISSED CALLS

- ☐ Voicemail is checked at set times, not "when someone gets to it."
- ☐ Every missed call gets a callback or text the same business day.
- ☐ I can see a list of missed calls from the past week.
- ☐ My voicemail greeting tells callers when they will hear back.

5. AFTER FIRST CONTACT

- ☐ If a lead doesn't answer, we try again, and I know how many times and over how many days.
- ☐ Every lead is written down somewhere (CRM, spreadsheet, or notebook) with its outcome.
- ☐ I review lost leads at least once a month to see where they stalled.

READING YOUR RESULTS

Count the boxes you could not check. Each one is a spot where a paid lead can slip away before anyone quotes the job. Start with the section that has the most unchecked boxes. These are process fixes you can make inside your own business, whoever runs your ads.

Our work is Meta and Google ads management. We ask these questions before launch so we both read the results the same way.
